Northeast Natural Medicine Happy With New Space

Northeast Natural Medicine is settled into its new space at 19 Church Hill Road, Suite 1, having moved February 1 from its former location at 33 Main Street.

"We simply outgrew our space there," explained Dr Shawn Carney. "I was starting to keep tinctures at home on the kitchen counter, and I think that was a big clue that we needed more room," he laughed.

The new 850-square-foot office on Church Hill Road features a conference room and an exam room off of the reception area, and shares space with neurofeedback practitioner Dr Roseann Capanna-Hodge. Ample parking alongside the building is a benefit to the move, as well, said Dr Carney.

Northeast Natural Medicine offers therapeutic massage and minimally invasive intervention, through a variety of alternative treatments.

"We are using the constituents of the body to restore balance and proper function," Dr Carney said.

The office provides testing for nutrient deficiencies, metabolic problems, allergies, and treats Lyme disease and co-infections, in addition to other medical conditions. The general practice serves families, from infants to the elderly.

It is currently a contracted provider with insurance companies Aetna, Anthem Blue Cross Blue Shield, Cigna, Healthy CT, and Parker Hannifin's Wellness and Preventive Health Network.
